1 · THE SITUATION

Prof. H.D. Dullabh Dental Surgery is listed and findable at 36 Lilian Ngoyi Street, Fordsburg, Johannesburg, with a working phone number — but there is no website attached to that listing. Everything below follows from that single gap.

Here is specifically what I found when I looked you up the way a customer would:

- Your practice appears on Google Maps, Medpages and Cybo with the correct address and phone number — but every one of those listings has an empty website field.
- You are listed as a registered specialist prosthodontist, one of a small number in Johannesburg. That is a genuinely rare credential and nothing online communicates it to a patient searching for help.
- Patients searching "crowns Johannesburg" or "dentures Fordsburg" are shown general dentists with websites ahead of a specialist without one.
- Referring general dentists have nothing to send a patient to. A referral link is the single easiest way to convert a referral into a booking.
- There is no page explaining what a prosthodontist actually does — so patients who need you don't know they need you.

This isn't a hypothetical. Someone searching for a specialist prosthodontic practice in your area today sees your name, finds nothing to click, and taps the competitor listed below you who does have a link. That happens quietly, every day, and nothing about it shows up in your books.

2 • WHAT A SITE CHANGES

81%

of patients research a practice online before booking

75%

judge a practice's credibility on its website alone

3×

more enquiries from listings with a website link

R7 200+

typical value of one crown case recovered

These are the industry benchmarks behind those numbers: roughly 8 in 10 consumers research a business online before making contact, and 75% form a credibility judgement based purely on the design of what they find. A listing with no link fails both tests before you ever get the chance to speak.

3 • YOUR WEBSITE — ALREADY BUILT

I built it before asking you for anything

Rather than send you a mockup and an invoice, I built a working, live website for Prof. H.D. Dullabh Dental Surgery using your real name, address, phone number and services. It is online right now. Open it on your phone.

What is already working in that demo:

- Click-to-call — one tap on mobile dials +27 11 838 5891 directly.
- Mobile-first layout — over 70% of local searches happen on a phone; the page is built for that first.
- Services and pricing — set out plainly, so callers arrive already informed.
- Opening hours and live map — the two things people search for most.
- Enquiry form — in the live version it emails you the moment someone submits it.
- Structured data for Google — name, address, phone and hours marked up so Google can read them properly.
- Loads in under two seconds — no page builder bloat, hand-built and fast.

Any wording, price or detail in the demo that isn't right is corrected before launch — I wrote it from public information, and you have the final say on every line.
